My dear colleagues of Indian Society of Anaesthesiologists (Haryana state branch) & Gurugram city branch,

Warm greetings from ISA National Headquarters!

Our esteemed body, the ISA has been successfully organising the national conference year after year as an important part of its academic activities since the last 69 years. These conferences have grown to commendable levels in terms of the variety of events, quality and quantity in the forums of knowledge and communication and the provision of delegate comfort. Now, the soft winds of the 70th national conference of the ISA are emanating from the Millenium city of Gurugram.

This national conference that is being organised by ISA Gurugram city branch and hosted by ISA Haryana city branch from 22nd to 26th November 2023 with the theme 'Innovate, Integrate, Inspire' will be distinctive and will witness the august presence of nearly 50 international faculty who will share their academic experiences with us. The conference and workshops will provide a strong academic altar on which both young and senior anaesthesiologists will offer knowledge and burn their incense sticks of clinical experience to spread rich and varied academic fragrances. The conference is being held amidst the vast ocean of our subject wherein the waves of knowledge and clinical skills are strengthening regularly. It is certain that the delegates and faculty will churn the waters of scientific literature and clinical experience and leave no stone unturned to bring up from the depths hitherto unknown clinical facts to ponder and research upon.

I am sure that the faculty and delegates will thoroughly enjoy the opulence and comfort of Gurugram, the simple yet delicious cuisine from Haryana, the 'Land of Rotis', not to forget the lassi and the 'thandai', the colourful 'Phulkaris' and the folk dances amidst the outpour of academics.

It is a fact that every national conference has its own unique aura and is a product of the long hours of intellectual and physical toil of the organising teams. I sincerely appreciate the organising team of ISACON 2023 for their long hours of intellectual toil and sacrifice. Greetings

Dear readers

It gives me great pride and satisfaction to be a part of ISACON 2023.

Anaesthesiologists have progressed over the years from a humble (and often dubious) ancestry to a confident, competent, introspective community with excellent leadership skills and a great focus on safety. Though unable to shake off our imagery of back-room boys and girls, we are at the cusp of a new beginning. As we assume ever increasing and diverse mantles, our improving visibility and public profile promises greater prominence.

As old challenges recede, newer emerge. In the background of uneven delivery of safe healthcare in a diverse nation, we struggle with rising costs of treatment, reduced public confidence, ever increasing patient complexity, more demanding surgeons and pressures of keep abreast in a specialty which changes its boundaries each week. In addition, state and administrative attitudes towards the profession range from sycophantic fawning to indifference to downright hostility!

However, it is up to us to shape our future. Rapid progress in medicine promises greater safety. The development of internet and its spinoffs enables speedy dissemination of facts, opinions and peer reviews. Greater engagement with the public and leadership can gradually shape the opinion war in our favour.

For all of this to happen, we must be the change we want in the world. We must maintain our commitment to candour, transparency, honesty, hard work, reflection, diligence and vigilance. It is not a difficult effort.

Long Live ISA!
